Master Lecturer, Personality and Individual Differences, Board of Scientific Affairs, APA (2009);
Esther Katz Rosen Fund Lecture on Gifted Children and Adolescents, American Psychological Foundation (1994).

Miscellaneous Research Honors:

Festschrift and Lifetime Achievement Award, Creativity Conference, Southern Oregon University, Ashland (2019);
UC Davis Prize for Teaching and Scholarly Achievement (1994; $25,000 award, now $60,000);
Member, Sigma Xi (National Scientific Research Society, 1987);
Graduate Research Fellowship, National Science Foundation (1970-1972).

Google Scholar Citations:

h-index = 94 (the largest number h such that these h publications have h or more citations);

i10-index = 318 (the number of publications with 10 or more citations);

Single-year maximum = 2408 (in 2021);

Total citations = 38,209*;

Total cited publications > 470 (260 ≥ 20; 92 ≥ 100; 39 ≥ 200; 12 ≥ 500; 7 ≥ 1000; 2 ≥ 1500; most cited = 1927*).

N.B.: Given deficiencies in Google's algorithms, their citation counts are not positive monotonic functions of time. Hence, those counts can sometimes illogically decrease since the last update of this curriculum vita (above statistics from 6/27/2024).

*Both total citations and most cited had to be manually adjusted downward to remove thousands of incorrect attributions and merged citations (viz. neither 43,547 nor 7000, respectively). The former statistic is now an undercount by perhaps a thousand citations. Google cannot write programs that can determine who wrote what using the most basic bibliographic information!

Teaching:

Robert S. Daniel Award for Four Year College/University Teaching, Division 2 - Society for the Teaching of Psychology, American Psychological Association (2006);
UC Davis Prize for Teaching and Scholarly Achievement ($25,000 award, 1994; now $60,000);

Note: The foregoing publication list includes all published items as well as all in-press items for which copyright forms and/or contracts have been signed. Excluded are unpublished papers and commissioned chapters or submitted manuscripts that have not yet received formal acceptance in writing. In addition, "online first" items are retained as "in press" until the bibliographic details are fixed (e.g., date, volume, and page numbers for journal articles). That precaution avoids having to make substantial revisions to "in print" publication lists. After all, a year or more may separate "online first" and actual "in print" publications.
